On March 31, 2004, the Canadian government unanimously approved Bill C-45, which later became Act C-21. This Act holds organizations and individuals accountable for negligence, either through action or inaction, with regard to occupational health and safety, resulting in injuries or the death of an individual.

In order to avoid criminal prosecution and sanctions resulting therefrom, the necessary protective measures must be implemented.

🎯 Target audience

It is intended for all regular and casual workers as well as for all corporate executives.
